DISPENSARY SYSTEM SUBJECT OF DISPUTE

Judiciary Committee in Discussion Over Success or Failure of Canadian Plan

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON March 28—A dispute over the success or failure of the Toronto system of government liquor dispensaries emerged today from the investigation of prohibition enforcement and conditions conducted by the House judiciary committee

With the testimony of E C Drury former premier of the Province to the effect that the plan in vogue there has been an absolute failure, already in the record the wets proposed to bring the present provincial prime minister to Washington for testimony before the committee

Dispatches from Toronto however indicated that the premier George H Ferguson was ... to accept such an invitation although he offered to give representatives of the committee every aid if they should come to Canada for a first hand story of conditions there

Representative Linthicum Democrat Maryland and the chieftain of the wet bloc insisted nevertheless, that Ferguson be asked to appear He asserted that Drury was defeated by the present premier in an election the fundamental issue of which was the continuance of the government dispensary system.

He expressed surprise that Drury had testified and added that since he did so he thought that the "prime minister might be willing to give us the real facts either by mail or oral testimony"

The drys are expected to complete their testimony next Wednesday

PARLEY HOPES REST ON ITALY

Attention Now Directed to Effort at Compromise With Mussolini Group.

FRANCE IS BACK IN FOLD

Ready To Enter Five-Power Navy Pact but Opposes Parity with Italy.

By the Associated Press

LONDON March 28—Having succeeded in drawing France back into the five-power naval parley the American and British delegations today turned their attention particularly to Italy with the hope of some sort of compromise from the representatives of the Mussolini government

Meanwhile both among the delegation and conference observers the offer of security which will be made France as price of reduction of her naval figures and the consultative pact into which the Americans may be drawn continued the principal topic of conversation

But while the situation with reference to France apparently has been greatly eased and now gives promise of possible tangible development in the direction of a naval agreement, Italy has stood her guns and reiterated her original contention parity with any continental power

France as consistently is maintaining even though this phase of the naval argument is out of the limelight that she cannot accept parity with Italy and that the Rome government is contending for the right to build up to France's total with no intention or capacity to do so

The principal idea of the British and Americans now is to get the French and Italians face to face in

Hocking Valley To Warn Drivers Who Race Trains

WHAT is regarded as an innovation in safety measures had been taken today by the Hocking Valley railroad It is a remedy for those daring and foolish autoists of Marion and other points along the Hocking Valley lines whose favorite pastime is beating trains to crossings

If the motorist escapes once the "cure" is applied but if he ties with the train the first time we'll the cure won't help then

It's just meant for those who disregard the signals of watchman at a railroad crossing

As twas said if the motorist beats the train once the watchman takes the license number of the car and in a few days a postal card arrives via the mails. It reads

"Automobile bearing license number XXX registered in your name was observed to disregard the crossing watchman's stop signal and pass over the railroad in front of an approaching train The crossing watchman's stop signal is a friendly warning of danger Heed his signal

If dad happens to get the postcard and he was the driver of the automobile he won't say much to himself Most dads are like that But stop look and listen at what will take place if the wife daughter or son have had the family car out

FEAR COMMUNISTS HAVE MISSIONARIES

Authorities Express Concern for Safety of American Catholics in China.

By the Associated Press

CANTON March 28—Further concern for the 16 American Catholic missionaries at Kanchow Kiangsi province was shown today when it became known that authorities believed Nanahi 30 miles from Kanchow had fallen into the hands of Communists and bandits who have been pillaging and killing throughout the southern part of the province for weeks.

Although Chinese officials continued to maintain that the red siege on Kanchow had been lifted missionaries expressed doubt saying missionaries at Kanchow had said they would report dispersal of the bandits as soon as it took place.

Meanwhile attempts to communicate with cities of southern Kiangsi proved fruitless

Mission headquarters reported that three Finnish women missionaries had been captured and killed Feb 3, in northern Kiangsi

Natives the missionaries said told investigators who found the women's clothing on the bank of the stream that the women had been in the river three days

MRS. ROBERTS' MANSLAUGHTER TRIAL OPENS

Woman Faces Charge As Result of Death of Crossing Watchman

JURY TAKEN TO SCENE

Attorney Warner Claims Mrs. Roberts Not Racing Train to Intersection

A packed courtroom this morning heard the opening arguments in the trial of Mrs. Garnett Roberts, 290 Belle st charged with manslaughter following fatal injuries to Martin Van Buren Whittaker Big Four crossing watchman at State st on Feb 22

The case is being heard in common pleas court with Judge George R. Scofield presiding

Visits Scene

Soon after the jury was sworn in and the case outlined by Prosecuting Attorney Alfred Donithen for the state of Ohio and Attorney Fred W Warner counsel for Mrs Roberts the jury was taken to the scene of the accident in order to become acquainted with the situation

The state contends Mrs Roberts did unlawfully kill one Martin Van Buren Whittaker when her Chevrolet sedan collided with the watchman while the latter was at his post of duty It charges her with running at an excessive rate of speed on Mill st in an attempt to beat to the State st. crossing a freight train coming from the west, the same direction in which the automobile was traveling

Attorney Warner declared to the jury that Mrs Roberts did not race the train that the latter was not running faster than 10 miles an hour due to pulling upgrade and that she had sufficient time to cross the tracks before the train He attorney charged that Whittaker was not at his post as Mrs Roberts crossed the tracks but that he moved directly in the path of the car which resulted in a collision

The defense further declared that sufficient time had elapsed after the collision to permit a truck following Mrs. Roberts' car to cross the tracks before the train arrived at the crossing It further declared she was traveling at not more than 20 miles per hour and that she made no attempt to beat the train to the Prospect st and Main st crossings as alleged by the prosecution but that on the contrary the State st. crossing was the point where she intended to cross She was driving the defense argued to her home on Bellevue which terminates on State st and had she crossed the tracks at any

WARM SUN CHASES SPRING BLIZZARD

Weather Begins Return to Normalcy as Snow Does Fadeout.

Under the influence of a warm sun, Ohio and neighboring states today were recuperating from a tardy winter blizzard that is blamed for a total of 13 deaths and considerable damage

In spite of the sun, snow and ice was hesitant to leave streets and sidewalks here, while other cities reported streets and walks to be covered with slush

Fair weather is predicted for Marion tonight followed by increasing cloudiness and not much change in temperature Saturday

Down to 26

The mercury hit a low mark of 26 degrees here last night, eight degrees below the high mark of 34 yesterday A year ago the high and low temperatures were 60 and 42 degrees

Throughout the state, transportation schedules, which were disrupted in many sections by snow drifts were resumed today The Marion-Toledo line of the Mang Bros. Transit Co. was again running buses through on schedule. Those buses were stalled in a 300 foot snowdrift north of Canby yesterday.

Chicago splashed about today in two billion tons of slush, Associated Press dispatches say

First came the winter gale, raging madly and whipping spring far southward; then the snow, two days and nearly 20 inches of it; and then came the thaw.

LEADER NAMED BY HINDENBURG

Bruening Assigned to Task of Forming New German Cabinet.

PRESIDENT ISSUES ORDER

Wants Party Squabbling Ended, Requests Enemy To Suspend Opposition.

By The Associated Press

BERLIN March 28 — Heinrich Bruening until recently little known outside the Centrist party was designated today as chancellor of the Reich and instructed by President Von Hindenburg to form a government to succeed that of Hermann Mueller which resigned yesterday

The president who usually is cited as an incarnation of imperturbability seemed to have his insides up and instructed Herr Bruening to work fast forget party pettifoggings and construct a cabinet which above all can put through the budget and financial reform programs

Confers With Enemy

Shortly after departure of Herr Bruening from President Von Hindenburg's quarters the president received his political enemy Dr Hugenberg leader of the extreme nationalists to persuade him for his country's welfare to give up his opposition at this point Dr Hugenberg was asked to permit Martin Schiele former minister of agriculture to accept that portfolio in the new government thus insuring nationalist collaboration

Herr Schiele is president of the Federal Farmers federation and enjoys the confidence of the Agrarian population.

Herr Bruening's task of constructing a cabinet supported by a safe majority is not an easy one, for he needs 24 Reichstag votes for a majority and the coalition parties, after defection of the socialists, can muster only 148

Even should some minor fractions of party strengths offer their support this would bring the new government's voting power to only 207 out of a total of 428, hence the president's efforts to secure Herr Schiele as a member of the ministry

Should the nationalists refuse their collaboration Herr Bruening is pledged nevertheless to accomplish his mission and go before the Reichstag with a minority cabinet which he feels that neither nationalists nor socialists would have the courage to overthrow

Former U. S. Soldier Pays with Life for Murder of Comrade.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 28—Louis Galvano, 29-year-old former U. S. soldier, died on the gallows at the New Castle county workhouse today for the slaying of his fellow comrade, Private Arthur C. Clark of Fort Du Pont on last Christmas day.

The hangman's trap was sprung shortly after 10:00 o'clock this morning. Galvano plunged to his death without a whimper.

Just before he walked up the scaffold steps, Galvano handed a sealed letter to Father J. Francis Tucker and asked him to "hold this until midnight—then open it."

Authorities believe the missive contains information in connection with other crimes which were possibly committed by the youth

Shortly before the robbery of Plumley in the rear of the Grand theater two men entered the Miller Jones shoe store at 150 E Main st, and took eight pairs of socks from the front counter Followed outside by the manager who had seen them in the act they dared him to attempt to search them The descriptions of the men tally with that of the two who later robbed Plumley.

WARDEN DETERMINED TO RULE PRISONERS

Convicts Clubbed as Missouri Pen Goes Under Iron Hand Rule.

By The Associated Press

JEFFERSON CITY Mo. March 28—Inaugurating an iron hand rule at the Missouri penitentiary today, scene of mutinous disorders for two days, guards clubbed 15 unruly convicts this morning when they attempted to "get tough" as they were called from their cells.

The convicts were injured sufficiently to require treatment in the prison hospital Some of them, the guards said were accused of having beaten other prisoners for failing to join in yesterday's strikes and other acts of disorder

A checkup today showed that a total of 60 convicts had been treated at the hospital for injuries inflicted by guards or, in some cases, by their own companions.

"I'm going to take ... to this prison if it takes ... to do it," Warden Leslie Rodolph advised the convicts assembled in the main dining hall last night.

Several score of suspected ringleaders were isolated today while approximately 300 more were segregated in the cell building for "hard boiled" criminals, all facing prison discipline.

No shots were fired in quelling yesterday's outbreak Prison guards, augmented by Jefferson City police and machine gun squads from National Guard units controlled all vantage points An airplane of the 110th observation squadron was landed with a supply of tear gas bombs from St Louis

Sergeant "Mugs" 'Em

BY virtue of the proverb, practice makes perfect, Desk Sergeant F. E. Reardon is an expert photographer and finger print man.

Not only does Sergeant look after the police work of mugging and taking finger prints of criminals but takes similar records for criminals captured by Sheriff John J. Francis and his deputies.

Before a prisoner can be sent to the penitentiary, workhouse or reform school, these identification records must be made.

Two photographs, a front and side view, are attached to one side of a standard sheet used for the purpose. On the same side with the photographs is a short history of the prisoner showing name, age, birthplace, marks of identification, criminal record and what have you.

On the opposite side fingerprints are recorded. An individual print of each finger and thumb is made and then the fingers and thumb of each hand are made in a group.

A copy of these records are placed on file at police station where Sergeant Reardon can give you the 'dope' on any criminal arrested here in the last few years.

Don't Go to Extremes To End Constipation

When bad breath or a coated tongue, biliousness or headaches warn of constipation, don't take violent purgatives. There's no use when a candy Cascaret will stop the trouble in a day, will cleanse your system pleasantly and completely.

The relief you get so promptly from Cascarets is lasting. Cascarets are made from cascara, a substance which medical authorities agree actually strengthens the bowel muscles.

So Cascarets are a blessing to old folks with weakened bowels, to children, to anyone in need of establishing regular bowel habits. Ten cents a box—all drug stores.—Adv.

JACQUELINE ON HER OWN

OMINOUS shadows threaten her as she sets out with the one and only thought of forgetting her drab life—with startling suddenness the bubble bursts.

by RICHARD STARR

COPYRIGHT 1930, BY RICHARD STARR

[illegible] gayly recited: "I do [illegible] Mr. Dell; the reason [illegible] I cannot tell."

CHAPTER 1

A Thwarted Young Man

[illegible] LINE chuckled inwardly [illegible] she felt a hand touch [illegible]ingly, and then close [illegible].

[illegible] a moment expe[illegible] had a faint suspicion that for several weeks [illegible] Brown had been trying [illegible] to her.

[illegible] thing happened. Mr. [illegible] continued to stare steadily at the screen and smoke [illegible].

[illegible] ked it with a desperate [illegible]ness, as if it were a thing [illegible] to be done at all costs. [illegible] same desperate earnestness he continued to clutch her [illegible] his attitude rather suggest[illegible] that he did not know he [illegible].

It seemed to Jacqueline that [illegible] caught hold of her hand [illegible] darkness by accident.

"Perhaps he thinks it's one of [illegible]," she said to herself.

For the moment Jacqueline had lost interest in the screen in the stress of dominating events. She peeked round discreetly.

Her eyes having become accustomed to the gloom of the London theater, she perceived that Mr. Brown had cleverly engineered her to an isolated corner. She rather thought this must also be an accident. Mr. Brown did not strike her as a Napoleon of strategy. But you never could tell about these quiet young men. Even a man with a chin discreetly in retreat, like Mr. Brown's, sometimes had grit and brains. A large experience of life across a drapery counter had taught Jacqueline many things—among others that chins are very little help as an index of character. She leaned a little closer in the friendly obscurity.

"I don't want to hurry you, Mr. Brown," she said with added sweetness, "but when you have quite finished with my hand I should like it back again. I want to powder my nose, and that takes two hands you know."

"Huh!" remarked Mr. Brown. He did not exactly say it, but threw it out gratuitously into the atmosphere, as if he were finished with it.

But he released her hand, and Jacqueline performed mystic rites with a dainty little round cardboard box and a little round pad, upon which she scrubbed her nose [illegible]fully. In the middle of the operation the lights went out. Jacqueline serenely finished the [illegible].

They repaired to a neighboring [illegible]shop, Jacqueline looking rather severe and still a little worried about her nose; Mr. William Brown in some trouble.

He was not bad-looking, even without a chin . . . that is to say, without any chin worth talking about. With a chin he would have been approaching handsome. He served at the drapery counter of Byrams Limited, which was officially known as an emporium. Jacqueline had been at the drapery counter once, but lately Mr. Keswick Dell, the buyer, had looked at the tall slender girl with a seeing eye, and had promoted her to "Models."

This, from Jacqueline's point of view, was to the good, as it meant an increase of salary. But Mr. Dell's seeing eye gave promise of making itself a nuisance if not restrained. However, Jacqueline flattered herself that she could put Mr. Dell in his place if necessary.

Mr. Brown lived out; Jacqueline lived in. This was the weekly [illegible] off; and four times in the last fortnight Mr. Brown had asked her to accompany him to the picture-show.

Jacqueline felt that declaration of some sort was hanging over [illegible], as suspense of any kind always worried her, she was determined to bring matters to a head this evening if possible.

[illegible] put her bare round elbows on the table defiantly, and nibbled a piece of cake. The worst of Jacqueline was that when she tried to be serious and business-like she could not help looking [illegible]. At these moments her brown eyes were calculated to play havoc with the emotions of any young man between the ages of 20 and 90.

"[illegible] fin, Mr. Brown!" she [illegible].

"[illegible]?" ejaculated Mr. [illegible] startled.

"[illegible] it's French," replied [illegible]. "It means 'take [illegible].' Why did you hold my [illegible] like that just now?"

[illegible] Brown turned away, and [illegible] quite obvious that he was [illegible] again. "Can't I hold [illegible]?" he asked.

"[illegible] you can't, Mr. [illegible]. You ought not to need [illegible] that."

"[illegible] have you let me take you out there?" persisted Mr. Brown with a hollow note.

"Because I've enjoyed it, and I thought you had."

"I have."

"Very well then, we're quits," said Jacqueline. "I let you take me to the pictures and spend ninepence on my seat because I think it's worth ninepence to anybody to have the pleasure of my society. In fact, it's cheap at ninepence. But that doesn't include holding my hand."

There was a prolonged pause after this, with Mr. Brown again wrestling internally with emotional storms. So prolonged that Jacqueline's attention wandered.

Two men had just sat down at a table on her left, and the face of one of them fascinated her. It was exactly like the face of a horse.

"If he looks straight at me," she said to herself, "I'm absolutely certain I shall say 'Gee up!'"

"Put your shirt on Prinkipo tomorrow, my boy, and you'll make a pot," Jacqueline heard him say. "I'm not talking for the sake of making the air hot—I know, my son. Got it straight from the horse's nosebag."

"There!" murmured Jacqueline. "I knew his face must have come out of a nosebag."

"It's a hundred to one chance," continued the man with a face like a horse; "and, take it from little me, I'm right in the know. She's the pick of the Warwickshire handicap, and she's got all the rest whacked to a standstill before she starts. She'll spread-eagle the field. It's just like picking up money, my son."

"Now what on earth does he mean by all that?" murmured Jacqueline inwardly.

A hoarse whisper sounded close to her ear: "Jacqueline, I love you!"

It was Mr. Brown, but Jacqueline for the moment had forgotten his troubles. She looked at Mr. Brown vacantly, and said: "Put your shirt on Prinkipo tomorrow, my boy, and you'll make a pot."

"What!" gasped Mr. Brown.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" she returned penitently. "You see those two men just going out—one of them with a face like a horse?—well, that is what he was saying to his friend just now, and I'm wondering what on earth he means by it. What's the Warwickshire handicap, Mr. Brown?"

"Horse-racing," answered Brown. "The Warwickshire is tomorrow, I believe, but I'm not in touch with racing nowadays. I've had my fling at that. It's a mug's game."

But Jacqueline was not to be thwarted. There is nothing that surpasses the resistance of a woman when she is curious. Piece-meal she drew Mr. Brown out; with the air of a man who had a lurid past connected with the turf he reluctantly answered her questions.

"Girls don't understand racing," he said in dismissal. "Best thing for you is to leave it alone, or you'll burn your fingers like I did. I've heard about those tips straight from the stable."

"But this man knows," murmured Jacqueline with a dreamy look and Mr. Brown might have been amused and startled if he had known what little effect his words had in stifling her interest in a 100-1 shot.

Mr. Brown stared at her with the expression of man in a hypnotic trance. Mr. Brown's losses seemed to have embittered him.

"What was that you were saying about loving me, Mr. Brown?"

Mr. Brown jumped and pulled himself together with an effort. "I said I loved you, Jacqueline. I have loved you for months; years, I think. I have loved you ever since you first came into the drapery, when we used to sit opposite each other at meal-times."

"Why do you love me, Mr. Brown?"

"I . . . don't know. A man doesn't know why he loves a girl. He just loves her. I like your face and your ways . . . and the way you carry yourself in those Paris models. . . . And I like the color of your eyes, and the color of your hair, and the color of . . . of . . ."

"Don't you say my nose, Mr. Brown, or I'll never speak to you again."

"I love you, Jacqueline. I love you, my dear," ended Mr. Brown, looking profoundly miserable.

"Well!" said Jacqueline.

Mr. Brown blinked.

"Mr. Brown, [illegible] Jacqueline, "[illegible] the thing to tell a girl [illegible] her [illegible] you also tell her that you want to marry her."

"I [illegible]," said Brown eagerly. [illegible] Jacqueline [illegible] the [illegible].

"That's all right, then," returned Jacqueline, "[illegible] as you had [illegible]. And [illegible] Mr. Brown [illegible] I shall [illegible] have [illegible]."

"[illegible] marry me, Jacqueline?"

"No, I won't marry you, Mr. Brown. I'm very sorry to hurt [illegible] you [illegible] when [illegible] of [illegible]."

"Why won't you marry me?" [illegible] Mr. Brown hoarsely.

"Because I'm not the sort of girl for you, [illegible] you are the sort of man for me, and we should never be happy [illegible]."

"But you are the sort of girl for me," insisted Brown.

"You think so," returned Jacqueline sweetly. "[illegible] you don't know me. I may be the right color and all that, but you don't know what there is inside me. And besides, you're not the sort of man for me. I hate to hurt you, Mr. Brown, but I must tell you the truth."

CHAPTER 2

A Pot of Gold

IT WAS a blow to Mr. Brown to have Jacqueline refuse him. Somehow he had not speculated upon that possibility, so sure had he been that the progress he had made portended a successful culmination of his rather old fashioned courtship.

As he gazed at Jacqueline's lovely brown eyes he could see that it did hurt her to reveal her feelings.

"I'm a steady man," he pleaded. "I don't drink, and I've cut out horse-racing and all that. I save money. I've got nearly a hundred pounds—"

"Please, Mr. Brown," Jacqueline interjected, and her eyes were misty, "let's not say any more about it. I am sure you would not be happy if you married me. I might not always be the same color, you know."

"There is somebody else," said Mr. Brown gloomily.

"There is nobody else at all, Mr. Brown," she replied.

"There is. I believe Keswick Dell wants to marry you."

"Oh, yes, I believe he does," Jacqueline readily agreed, "but I assure you I like you a heap better than Mr. Dell. I wouldn't marry him if he were the last man in the world."

"You see, Mr. Brown, you're too steady for me. Perhaps it's wrong of me, but I want to see life. I want to have my fling. Once I saved 10 pounds and spent it in one evening, but it was the greatest night of my life and well worth it."

Brown looked as if he were about to faint as Jacqueline continued.

"I lived the life of a lady that night. I hired an evening dress—a very beautiful one. Then I went to the Savoy for dinner and sat all alone in gorgeous state. At the table next mine was a peer of the realm—an earl and his two daughters, and I don't mind telling you that little Jacqueline attracted more attention than his children.

"Afterwards I took my coffee and cigaret in the palm court until my car arrived."

"Your car!" muttered Mr. Brown.

"Yes, I had a private car. An attendant came in and announced 'Miss Grey's car!' You should have seen Miss Grey walk out of that lounge. That alone was worth 10 pounds. Then I drove to the opera. When I got home I had less than half-a-crown left."

"And then I suppose you were sick with regret?" Mr. Brown queried.

"Oh, no! I was happier than I had ever been. Now I am saving another 10 pounds and will do the same thing, but I wish I could have 500 pounds of my very own. Then I would live as I did that one night until the 500 was spent."

Mr. Brown was silent, she did puzzle him.

They parted a few hundred yards from Byrams. It was still fairly early in the evening. Mr. Brown obviously had been unwilling to prolong matters after Jacqueline's adverse decision.

In a narrow side street near the famous emporium Jacqueline came upon old Dobbin huddled on the coping of a railing where he had taken shelter from the sleet that was falling.

Old Dobbin was a peddler and Jacqueline regularly each week bought a box of matches from him as he stood outside Byrams and always added a smile and a kindly word.

"Why, Dobbin, what's the matter?" she inquired anxiously.

"Very ill, miss," he mumbled, but a glint of light came into his dull eyes at her approach.

Jacqueline rubbed his cold hands. "We'll have to get you home. Where do you live?"

"Paradise road, Poplar, miss."

Jacqueline suggested a cab and overruled the old man when he demurred. She left him and found a cab. She drove a hard bargain with the driver. She helped the old man into the cab.

Paradise road was an evil-smelling slum in one of the worst parts of Poplar, so she was surprised when they made their way up seven flights of stairs to find Dobbin lived in a room neatly furnished and clean.

Dobbin collapsed into an armchair, and Jacqueline set about making a fire. She thought she would make the old man a cup of tea to warm him, and took what she imagined to be a large tea caddy from a very high shelf.

She was amazed at its weight, and more amazed on opening it to find it full to the brim with sovereigns!

As she stood with the tin coffer in her hands, staring at the glittering contents, there was a strangled gasp from Old Dobbin.

He was leaning forward in his chair, his crooked fingers clutching at the air, and a look of sheer terror on his face.

"Don't touch that!" he croaked. "Don't touch that! Put it back!"

"What are they, Dobbin? Are they sovereigns?" she asked.

"No, no, they're . . . they're nothing. Nothing at all. Not worth anything. Put it back I tell you."

"It's all right, Dobbin," she said quietly, as she replaced the tin. "Don't worry. Nobody is going to touch them."

She made the tea, her mind full of thoughts concerning this strange old man who denied himself many things to add to his hoarded pile of sovereigns.

She decided to give him a word of advice before she left. "I'm very glad you've got money, Dobbin, and it doesn't matter to me what you do with it. But be sensible. Give yourself a week's holiday. Coddle yourself a bit and get well."

She left him and in the dingy darkness of Paradise road a man jostled her. He disappeared like a shadow.

A moment later Jacqueline discovered that her handbag was gone.

Her predicament was grave. With the bag was gone every penny she had with her. All hopes of getting back to Byrams before closing time vanished. The order had gone out that the next assistant to come in after 10 p. m. would be dismissed.

With a heavy heart Jacqueline began the long tramp across London.

CHAPTER 3

The Obdurate Mr. Dell

ELEVEN-THIRTY found Jacqueline outside the assistants' entrance to Byrams. In the back street there was a cloistral calm, and the huge building was as black as a mausoleum.

"This is cheerful," she said. "I'm out for the night."

She was wet through and tired.

The housekeeper was a disappointed man with a hard heart—even in normal daylight hours. Jacqueline knew that even her most wistful smile would not move him.

A policeman emerged from the shadows and approached, and the rays of his lantern illuminated her face.

"What's the matter, missy?" he inquired.

Jacqueline explained her predicament in a few words.

"That's tough. There's a girl's home near here and I'd be glad to lend you the money. I've been doing rather well lately, and I expect to pick up a [illegible] tomorrow on the Warwickshire [illegible]."

[illegible] Jacqueline was stunned. "Are you putting [illegible] money on Prinkipo?" she asked eagerly.

"No [illegible]. Prinkipo's [illegible] the [illegible] on Nosey Boy. He's pretty [illegible]."

"How much would I get if I put five pounds on Nosey Boy?" Jacqueline asked.

"He is [illegible] to one. [illegible] pounds, I [illegible]. But you've had no money."

"I have, but I can't get at it there." She pointed to the windows of the dormitory.

"Would you put five pounds on Prinkipo for me?"

"Yes, missy, but he isn't going to win. Don't plunge on an outsider. If you want to back your fancy, throw me half a crown out the window and I'll [illegible] for you."

"But I'll never get up there. I can't get in."

The policeman considered a moment. Obviously his [illegible] had been aroused by Jacqueline's troubled brown eyes.

"I'm going to get you inside," he said confidently. "I'll see you through as sure as my name is Jack Rogers. And I'll put a fiver on Prinkipo if you're set on it, though I tell you you'll lose your money. Now watch me."

He pressed the bell and they heard its wild jingle echoing through the desolate stillness of the great building.

"What now?" whispered Jacqueline, as they heard footsteps far away inside.

"Snuggle in the corner," said the policeman. "When the old boy comes I'm going to take him down the street to look at a window which I shall pretend is not properly bolted. While I'm gone you slip in. It's easy."

Jacqueline clasped her hands. "Oh, you genius! Are all policemen as nice as you?"

"Not by miles and miles, miss," grinned the man in blue. "Don't trust 'em. When you get in, throw your five pounds out of that top window—that is, if you trust me."

"I do," said Jacqueline.

It all worked like a charm. The irate housekeeper came out, and was duly led down the street by the wily Rogers. Jacqueline slipped in and up the stairs. Half a dozen slats of light glimmered in the gloom of the long bare dormitory, and there was a smell of cigaret smoke.

There were smothered screams from half a dozen smokers sitting up in their beds.

"Jacqueline Grey! How did you get in?"

"Never mind, my children," said Jacqueline. "I've been to Paradise; I've been robbed, I'm wet to the skin, and I am not downhearted."

"Well, you're in for it, Jacqueline Grey," said Emily Gibbs.

"Why?"

"Keswick Dell sent for a roll call at 10 o'clock, and you were reported absent."

"My luck's out," murmured Jacqueline.

In the darkness she wrapped her five one pound notes in a handkerchief. She stuffed the notes in the toe of an old shoe and threw it out of the window. She could see P. C. Rogers in his glistening cape far below, and he flashed her a signal with his lantern.

Late the next afternoon Keswick Dell sent for Jacqueline to his private room.

He was a big, florid faced man of something over 40—a widower. All the girls hated him except two or three who toadied to him. Emily Gibbs was one.

"Jacqueline," he said, as soon as the door was shut. He caught her by the arm.

"My name is Miss Grey," returned Jacqueline icily, "and that's my arm when you're quite finished with it."

"I want my answer, Jacqueline," said the buyer a little hoarsely.

"You've had it already, Mr. Dell," returned Jacqueline.

"I said I would give you time to think it over. Think what you're doing, child. For a girl in your position it's an offer you're not likely to get again. I'm in love with you, crazily in love. I am a widower with no family. I am fairly well-to-do, and my position here is a good one."

Jacqueline stares at the sovereigns; then at the terrified man.

MRS. HASBROUCK'S perceptions [illegible] as keen as her eyes, and I was [illegible] conscious that she guessed [illegible] of [illegible] of the motorist who had taken a lodging for the night. But she made no comment and I achieved a lame sentence to the effect that one of the [illegible] she had [illegible] break down.

"[illegible] break down," she repeated a little grimly. "I'm right here on the through route and have a good chance to see them. Now is there anything else I can do for you, Mrs. Graham? You are sure you need nothing more for Mrs. Underwood? Oh! I haven't had a chance to tell you before. Your niece wanted to go for a moonlight walk, but according to your instructions I made an excuse to keep her inside. She didn't say anything, but I don't think she liked it very well—probably thought I was an impudent old busybody"—she laughed comfortably—"but I couldn't help that."

"She couldn't understand your prohibition, that was all," I answered. "She told me about it, and when I had explained things to her she was content."

"I am glad of that and I hope you can get a good rest now. You must be terribly tired rushing around as you have done."

"Yes, I am tired, but" I faced her with sudden resolution, "will you wait up for me ten minutes? I want to come down and talk to you."

"It won't be my bedtime for an hour yet," she said, "and I'll be only too glad of a little talk. It gets lonesome up here in the winter time."

A Peeping Tom

The gleam of Mary's light showed beneath her door as I reached the top of the stairs. At my knock I heard her cautious "Auntie Madge?" and I added her name to my affirmative answer that she might feel doubly secure in opening the door. I knew that she had been shaken by the message concerning Jack Leslie, which Mr. Underwood had bade me give her in lieu of his real reason for wishing to keep her close to me while we were away from home. But I was not prepared for the feverish haste with which she drew me into the room and locked the door after me.

"Oh, Auntie Madge!" she gasped, "I thought you'd never get back. I've been so frightened."

Her nervousness was contagious, but I drew a taut rein on my own visible excitement and patted her shoulder reassuringly.

"But I'm here now," I told her, "and nobody can get you. So suppose you tell me what frightened you."

"A man watching our window," she answered, and I sat down in the nearest chair, staring at her.

"You are sure?" I queried, although Mrs. Hasbrouck's news of the motorist who had sought lodgings bolstered my conviction that Mary's startling statement was not prompted by hysteria.

"Positive," she said firmly. "If you'll put out the light and draw the curtain I'll show you just where he was standing. He beat it as soon as he saw I was looking at him."

I rose and put out the light and advanced with her to the window.

"Stand to one side when you draw the curtain," I bade her, with a reversion to the caution of my secret service days.

"He Was Right There!"

"I don't overlook that bet," Mary retorted. "Once is enough for me."

When we had drawn the curtain stealthily aside, we knelt, one on each side of the window and peered out at the yard below. Just opposite our window and but a few feet from it was the highest point of a grassy hillock. Anyone standing on it would be almost on a level with our windows, and two or three large bushes were sufficient to shield a person so stationed from anything but the closest observation.

"He was right there, between those bushes," Mary whispered, pointing. Then she shivered, and I reached up my hand and pulled down the curtain.

"But he isn't there now, nor anywhere else in the yard," I told her as I lifted her up and drew her back to her chair. "And—dearest—might you not have been mistaken about his watching this room. This moonlight night is so beautiful, almost anyone might yield to an impulse to climb that little hillock and look at the mountains."

"But he wasn't looking at the mountains," she persisted. "He had field glasses and he had them trained directly on this window. The moonlight glinted on the lenses and I saw them and him almost as plainly as I see you now."

A STORY OF LOVE AND LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD

BY SIDNEY HERSCHEL SMALL

CHAPTER 41

PAST window after window, John Andrew and Anne walked, clear down to T Z, through a door and into a long, bright corridor, along it and by doors marked with names and title; at the very end was R. W. DOBSON in small gold letters, and, under it, PRESIDENT. A woman stood at the door, and, saying only "Mr. Kellogg?" took man and girl through another office, her own, and into one from which light filtered evenly.

"How do you do, sir?" Dobson said, rising from his chair. "I knew your father well . . . push over that armchair for the lady, Miss Chase . . . sit down, Mr. Kellogg, and——"

John Andrew smiled—not too well—and, nodding, said hopefully, "Miss Ames happened to be with me, sir, and, since I'll only be a moment or so, and I couldn't find a parking place near the bank, she came with me——"

The president smiled also, acknowledged the introduction, and then leaned back in his chair. "We've had a telegram from Craig, and also from our New York connection, sir . . . how do you like Los Angeles? . . . and anything we can do——"

John Andrew said quietly, "I'm afraid that I was rather vague in my own wire east, but——"

"The answer to us was very explicit, Mr. Kellogg. Whatever you want——"

John Andrew looked at the polished surface of the broad desk—never at Anne—and then said, "Firstly, Consolidated—the picture company, that is—are to pay me about $10,000, sir; I'll have the check turned over to you, and want it held intact. That is, credit it to me, please. And I wish you'd have some one arrange with Consolidated to return the check after payment to you; I'd like to keep it, if it can be done——"

"Gladly, sir. Are you interested in pictures? That's a long way from . . . if you'll pardon me . . . the sort of investment——"

"Some day I'll tell you all about it," Kellogg said. "It really turned out very well . . . as far as I'm [illegible] . . . only [illegible] a [illegible] of [illegible] he'll do, and——"

[illegible] thousand dollars [illegible] bills." [illegible] I'll be here. [illegible] By the way, we forwarded several hundred thousands in California Hydroelectric bonds for the Kellogg account yesterday; I am not sure that some of the stock might also prove a satisfactory investment. If you have the time you might look into it. Not heavily, but a few thousand shares. . . ."

"I still leave that entirely to Craig," John Andrew said quietly, wishing he dared glance at Anne. "If I may, sir, I'd like to use your telephone; I particularly want this check sent to you here, and"—decidedly swiftly—"I may want it paid to a man in San Francisco named Blake later; I can give the bank instructions about that after I've talked to the man. . . ." John Andrew asked the bank operator for Consolidated, hung up the telephone calmly, and, when it rang an instant later, said, "Mr. Fitzgerald . . . hello, Fitz . . . Kellogg . . . have that check sent to the California Southwestern marked for Mr. Dobson . . . who? . . . why, yes, she's here with me now . . . Anne, they want to talk to you at Consolidated . . ." and handed the telephone to her.

"Yes," Anne said, and "yes" again. John Andrew was free to watch her; he saw how her hand clenched about the instrument as she held it, but was not ready for the vehemence in her voice as she said quickly, "I wouldn't care to under the circumstances . . . , no . . . !" and swiftly, "thank you . . . good-by."

John Andrew covered the confusion in Anne's face by rising: "We're pretty busy this morning," he said. Picking up the sheaf of bank notes the secretary had brought, he shoved them into his pocket. "If I get a chance I'll investigate the power company, but it would be better to write Craig about it. Thank you very much, sir——"

Smiling at John Andrew and Anne, Dobson said, "Anything we can do for you. I trust you are enjoying your visit here——"

"In spots," said John Andrew, grinning. "When you're in New York, if I can return your kindness——"

"It's only business," the president said. "But you might assist Mrs. Dobson and myself . . . tell us the better show . . ."

"I'll look forward to seeing you again, sir . . ."

Just how they returned to the indignant Mercury neither John Andrew nor Anne could have ever told. Certainly they walked in silence, side by side, certainly avoided each other's eyes; when they came to a curb Kellogg—unknowingly—assisted the girl to step down the few inches with the greatest—and most unnecessary—of care. And when the custom built roadster leaped down the runway of the parking station the attendant said to his mate, "That's how these guys ruin good heaps," to which the other answered, "Yeah, but what crate except a Mercury'd start in high like that without stallin'?" John Andrew, however, really believed that he had started the car in the proper and usual manner; only the rhythmic sound of the engine in his ears pulled his hand from the shifting post as the jade green car swerved out into the heavy traffic.

What streets Kellogg took he did not know. Anne now said nothing, having so much to say; John Andrew, not knowing—and fearful—how to begin, was silent also. At last the streets became straighter, [illegible] broader, the buildings lower . . . [illegible] lined avenues . . . gently rolling [illegible] . . . suburbs . . . [illegible] flapping about new developments . . . and then the highway and the sea, with the beating surf sending glittering emeralds and diamonds of spray on the hard white sand. Far out a smudge of black smoke rose from some coastwise vessel; rose, thinned, and turned to violet vapor as it [illegible] the sky.

John Andrew hoped that Anne's hand would touch his arm, and then words might come last of all. But she finally said in a hard, tight voice, "John Andrew . . ."

The speedometer dropped instantly from 40 to 25.

"John Andrew . . . you . . . you . . ."

And from 25 to 15.

"Don't try to say anything," John Andrew said gently.

Up to 30 again, the sun glinting off the shining wings of the radiator cap like flying flame.

"You . . . you . . ." —Anne's voice broke.

The black figures slid from 30 to 0, and John Andrew's arms went around her hungrily; not until a passing car's horn blared insultingly did lips come from lips. Anne was laughing and crying. John Andrew glanced hastily about, saw that the road was again empty, and kissed her again, lips, half open, wondering cheek, bright hair. He ended by crumpling her lips in a [illegible] and kissing them full.

"The Unkissed Bride" a Modern Romance

BERTHA RUCK tells in her own breezy brand of fiction the joys and sorrows of marrying without love in "The Unkissed Bride." The reader is always assured of the unusual and always pleasing variation of a love-in-a-mist theme in the tales of this novelist and in this case is not disappointed.

Joy Harrison was the "unkissed bride." Modern without being a modernist, she assumed wifehood as the one way out of a disappointing love affair. It was a gesture to show her temperamental ex-lover that another man desired what he so basely scorned.

The story opens in London but the scene soon shifts to France where the married strangers work out their destiny. It develops into an amazing tale with humorous highlights. There is an unusual situation brought about by the erring lover's return to the … ne, a midnight elopement and an exciting chase by airplane.

Adventure Found in "Shanty-Boat"

"SHANTY BOAT," by Kent and Margaret Lighty, tells of their journey of 1,300 miles down the Mississippi river and paints a vivid picture of the strange half-hidden life of the river rats and hunkies which they encountered.

Where the river first becomes navigable they fitted out their 30-foot ark while experienced river men laid bets on how far they would get before wrecking their strange craft in the unruly current of the Mississippi. They glided past countless towns where river traffic once had hummed but which now are tumbling to ruin. They tied up at night in lonely bayous or at long-neglected steamboat landings. They made friends with the queer personalities of the river—would-be hermits, roving evangelists, escaped convicts, show-boat actors, old logging captains, moonshiners and river rats of every hue and cast. They weathered freak floods and storms or skimmed along with doors and windows open to the breeze.

To those who love the Mississippi and stories of adventure, the book will have an appeal.

Explorer Tells of Eskimo Life

"IGLAOMI THE LONE HUNTER," by Harold McCracken, is a story of the northern wilds. Iglaomi, son of an Eskimo chieftain, lives and plays and boasts of his prowess as a hunter. His father sends him forth alone into the wilderness to make good his boast. With his sledge and dog team the boy sets out. Untold hardships and nearly death itself strew his path before he at last succeeds in bringing home three caribou and wins for himself the title of "Little Lone Hunter." The author, one of the foremost Arctic explorers, tells in a vivid picture of life in an Eskimo village and to the reader the frozen North becomes a place of human action and interest.

The Edingtons Have New Thriller

THE EDINGTONS, authors of "The Studio Murder Mystery," have written another thriller, "The House of the Vanishing Goblets."

A thousand ex-soldiers out on location in the filming of the greatest war spectacle ever produced and suddenly the whole enterprise is brought to a standstill, stunned by the brutal killing of the director and the leading man. Death came to them apparently in two separate rooms of a weirdly mysterious and empty mansion where they had gone by night to look over the ground for filming interiors the next day. How they died and how to account for the badly wounded stranger lying beside the director's body is a complex mystery that discloses new and stranger ramifications the further it is probed.

"Six Horses" Tell of Stage-Coach Days

WESTERN stage-coaching began in the gold-hunting days of '49, reached a peak of unexampled activity in the 60's and died out abruptly with the coming of the railroad. "Six Horses," by Captain William Banning and George Hugh Banning, is a full and unadorned account of the great days of staging in the West.

The authors refute the modern conception of staging as a kind of glorified Wild West show. The story they have drawn is full of heroism, of drama and the unique romantic quality which belongs to a pioneer occupation on a dangerous frontier.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

TODAY was Friday and me and Jubilee didn't feel so funny when we first woke up this morning. I looked at him and wondered what the teacher was going to do and he looked at me kinda anxious and then I thought of how her face looked and I grinned and then he wagged his tail and I kicked him out of bed. Then he got hold of the cover and pulled it off so I had to get up and I let him down by his rope and put my pants on hind side before I noticed what I was doing. It made the hind pocket easy to get into but the other pockets weren't so easy. So I took them off and turned them around. They are so used to being put on right side before that they don't feel comfortable when they are on backwards. Pants have got more sense than a person would think.

When the bunch got to the barn this morning they were all talking about the teacher and wondering who would get blamed for it and the Lost Bag of Tripe said he was going to tell her that Mush's wife done it and we told him if he did we would make his heels break his neck so he said he would keep his face shut. We ain't squealers.

When we got to school and went in the yard Mush's wife was standing by the door to the basement with her arms folded and all she did was look at us and we didn't have much fun playing pull-away or duck on the rock or stink-by-gosh or anything. We were all kinda glad when the bell wrang and we went upstairs. She followed us up and stood in our room door and when we were seated our teacher looked at her as if she wanted to know what she wanted and she asked our teacher if she happened to run across a sponge full of water yesterday. Our teacher looked supprized and said "No, I didn't run acrosst it. I sot acrosst it," and she kinda smiled and then we all laughed till I nearly choked. Our teacher went out in the hall with Mush's wife and closed the door and then she opened it again right quick and Nibs had leap-frogged over his desk and was straddle of the Lost Bag of Tripe's back and he liked to dropped dead when the teacher hollered at him. Then she closed the door again and we all sat still till she came back in. She didn't do anything except make Nibs and the Lost Bag of Tripe stay after school.

Every time she spoke to any of us we jumped. I wish if she is going to do anything she would do it and have it done with. We were all kinda disappointed when school let out and she let us go. We don't any of us know what she is going to do … why she is going to do it to.

Now you can protect her lovely hair!

Millions of men and women know how Danderine helps stop falling hair and dissolves the worst crust of dandruff; how easily it changes dull, lustreless, brittle hair into hair that is soft, sparkling, vigorous.

With Danderine it is so easy to train a child's hair; to keep it orderly, sparkling, clean. Danderine accentuates the natural curl of a child's hair. A girl's waves look more natural when set with it. And they stay in longer.

Use Danderine with children to overcome the evils of frequent washing. It puts back into hair and scalp the natural oils removed by soap and water.

Danderine isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. It is no trouble to use. Just put a little on the brush each time the hair is arranged. That will keep the scalp healthy and encourage the growth of long, silky and abundant hair. Five million bottles used a year is proof of Danderine's effectiveness.

AIDS SHERIFF

Mrs. W. O. Grimm, wife of the sheriff of Harrison county, West Virginia, cast aside her apron to answer a call from her sheriff husband to aid in a man hunt. They traced the suspect (wanted on liquor charges) to a house off the main road. Mrs. Grimm entered the front door while the sheriff went to the rear.

This Game of GOLF

By OB KEELER

By The Associated Press

I WAS introduced to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis by Mr Robert Tyre Jones Jr in front of the ninth green of Mr J[illegible] East Lake just after Lord High Commissioner of baseball had dubbed a chip shot to the green. Judge Landis had said something not at all unusual in such a situation.

As Mr Jones presented me Judge Landis said

Sir I apologize

I asked him what for—I had heard similar comments on innumerable occasions and had even made a few of them.

I apologize said Judge Landis to the utter and abysmal inadequacy of any language at my com[illegible] to set forth what I think of a shot like that. In my opinion golf's most vital need today is the [illegible] from the Sanskrit or the ancient Hebrew or from any other language classic modern or profane of expressions suitable to the situations which arise from time to time and in my own personal case frequently in a round of golf

At that Judge Landis plays what I should call a better than average game and he seemed to be getting along pretty well with Bobby as a partner in a match with Dan [illegible] and Sherwood Hurt, Atlanta amateurs played the afternoon of February [illegible]. Bobby for his part was having a somewhat sour round. The Commissioner specializes in direction rather than distance and he takes the game quite seriously.

In the little gallery following the match was Nap Rucker [illegible] years ago [illegible] pitcher [illegible] league.

[illegible] Bobby Jones [illegible] golf course before [illegible] I saw that [illegible] control of a baseball organ[illegible] that he can over [illegible] inspecting the Atlanta ball club [illegible] of the year.

I asked Nap Rucker [illegible] right in attributing a disproportionate amount of luck to left handed pitchers.

Marion Valets Win From Lima Tiger Rag Five

Marion Valets, fast colored basket ball team took a close game from the Lima Tiger Rags last night on the Steam Shovel court. The final score was 31 to 2[illegible]. ET TREND SHOWN MAGAZINE POLL

…s Only State Voting … in Latest Returns, …terary Digest Reports.

…YORK, March 28—The third report of its prohibition poll … today in "The Literary … 1,244,483 votes from 20 … the District of Columbia … Kansas the only state voting … There were 527,388 votes cast … of the eighteenth amend… 539,117 for modification and … for strict enforcement.

…turns evidence a slight gain … of those favoring repeal," a statement of the Digest said.

"Of the 20 states whose returns are listed in the current tabulations, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, and Washington show more votes in favor of enforcement than for either modification or repeal," the statement said. "In Missouri a strong dry vote runs considerably ahead of that for modification but the "Show Me's" vote for repeal is greater than either enforcement or modification. The other 10 states, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Minnesota, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and also the District of Columbia, give a vote for repeal greater than for either modification or enforcement. Georgia, the only southern state from which ballots have been tabulated, shows 4,061 votes for enforcement out of a total of 10,885 counted."

Figures for New York City, announced for the first time, show Manhattan and the Bronx voting wet, 16 to 1, and Brooklyn, listed separately, voting wet, 12 to 1.

Never Wash Chiffon Stockings in "Hard" Water

—It Fades and Ruins Them

One teaspoonful makes a basin of hardest water soft as rain-water—INSTANTLY.

Thus it keeps dainty chiffon from fade and "soap eat." You use only one-fourth as much soap.

Millions use it. You'll agree it's wonderful.

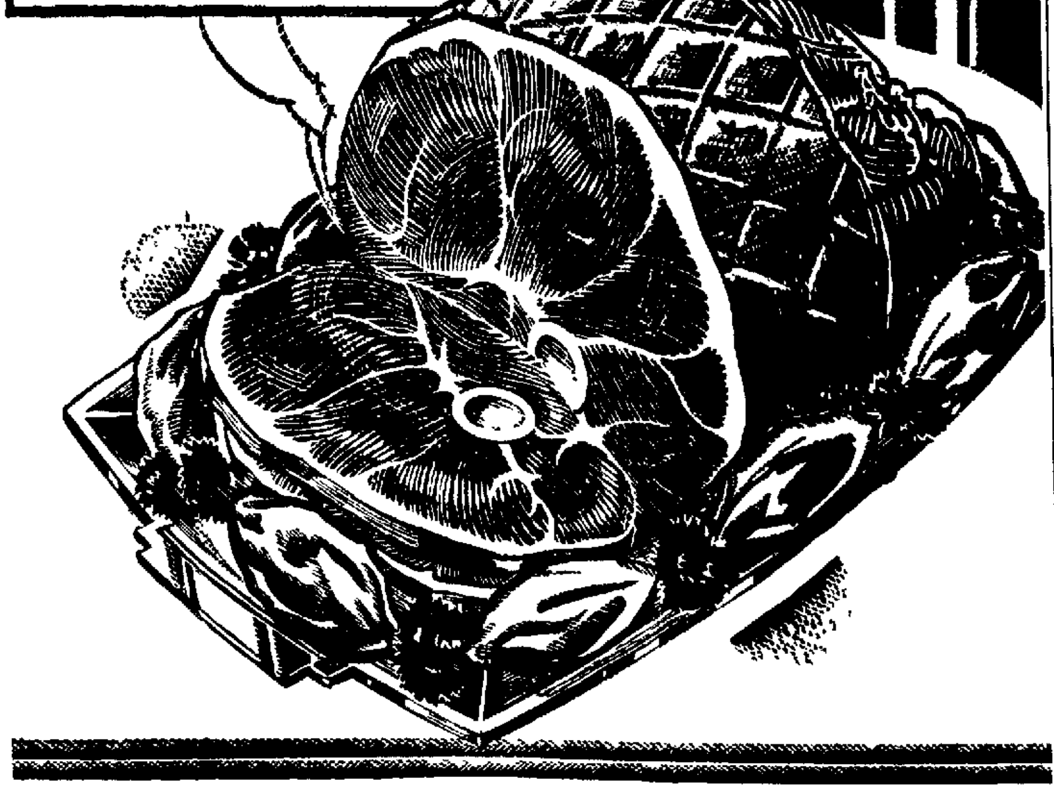
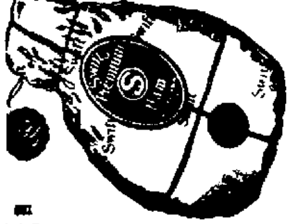
Swift's Premium Ham

Baked Premium Ham .... goldenly brown and clove-studded on the outside ... pink and white and delicately flavored to the bone. Bake the butt. The shank can be boiled and the center slices broiled. In each case, the family's verdict will be .... "May I have a little more please?"





But you must assure yourself that it's truly Premium. There's the tag, the wrapping, the branding on the rind, and the word "Swift" branded in brown dots on the edge of every piece.

The Famous North Woods Recipe . . .

A layer of beans
A layer of pork
A layer of beans
A cup of brown sugar
A cup of molasses

The real buried treasure of the far forests is ready for your dinner tonight. For Van Camp's has not only reproduced the "bean hole" beans recipe but added is the flavor-rich taste of "outdoor" cooking to stir jaded appetites and make men-folks ask for more. So easy to try—just insist to your grocer—"Bean Hole Beans—of course."

Nature's Color and Flavor!

The choice of the world's best tomatoes—the select, sun ripened fruit of Indiana—is back of the better goodness, flavor and smoothness of this Catsup. Until better tomatoes are grown, no one can produce better catsup. For here is the best of tomatoes with just the appetizing flavoring and spicing to make you say—"Van Camp's—of course!"

Henry Ford says

"Mass production is the answer to questions such as the price of food. WE HAVE IT IN THE CHAIN STORES WHICH HAVE DEVELOPED TREMENDOUSLY IN THE LAST FIVE YEARS. THEIR PRINCIPLE IS SOUND AND THEY SHOULD BE ENCOURAGED."

Kroger Stores are devoted to the principle of straightening out the line of distribution between the producer and the consumer to the end that this simplification may result in economies to the public.

Bean Family Is Source of Substitutes for Meat

HOUSEWIVES who rack their brains for variety in the way of meat substitutes may find some excellent aids in the bean family. During most of the year, the acquaintance with beans may be confined to one or two species—perhaps baked New York or New England style and string beans, fresh or canned.

But dried beans can be obtained in half a dozen varieties, and each kind may be used in combination with vegetables to form tempting new dishes. Beans are high in protein and also in vitamin content, and when properly cooked are wholesome and digestible even for small persons. Cowpeas and lentils can be prepared in much the same way as beans. But as these are very substantial foods they should always be accompanied by a generous amount of green vegetables—a dish of cooked greens and also a [illegible] green salad or [illegible].

Should Be Soaked

Dried beans of any kind should be soaked overnight. Drain off the water. Place in a saucepan, cover with boiling salted water and cook until soft. This may take one to [illegible] hours depending on the size of the beans and the quantity cooked. [illegible] but do not cook beans so long that they break apart. All the beans should remain whole though tender.

After this preliminary cooking the beans may be served just as fresh beans. The simplest method is to drain the beans, then reheat with a lump of butter, adding salt and pepper to taste. Or they may be heated with a few tablespoons of thick sweet cream instead of butter. A dash of curry instead of pepper improves the flavor.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, March 28

THE stellar movements for this day seem to hold an element of conflict. There may be unexpected changes with solid returns for industry and fidelity, but also there are omens of money losses and intrigues. Purely personal affairs may be agreeable and pleasant.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an interesting and eventful year with some advantageous change, but funds should be protected and precaution exerted as to subtle or crafty methods. A child born on this day should be ingenious, original and accomplished as well as practical and industrious. It should be trained in economy.

ensus Workers To Get nployment Information

...btain a true figure of ...of people who are out ...federal census bureau has ...the enumerators to take ...unemployment situation ...the 1930 census next ...according to District ...Frank A. Beery. "The ...ployment," Beery said, "will furnish a bench mark from which to measure the trend of unemployment in succeeding months and years. It will be a basis for future estimates, thereby removing uncertainty.

"The results of the census will furnish a picture of the unemployment situation as indicated not only by the number unemployed but by the attendant circumstances of unemployment. It will bring the answer to certain fundamental questions about which nothing at present is definitely known."

Persons having an occupation but not at work at the time the census is taken will be grouped into two main classes—those who have a job but are temporarily "laid off" on account of lack of orders, bad weather, sickness, etc. and those who are able to work and want work but cannot find it, Beery said.

Persons living on their income and not seeking work, as well as the infirm or feeble-minded, will not be ranked as unemployed, according to Beery.

CHICHESTERS PILLS

PURITAN MALT

—it's different

The "Controlled-Temperature Process" insures uniformity

Give two housewives the same material and ask them to bake bread.

One will produce a masterpiece—the other a lump of hardtack—out of the same flour.

The difference is in the skill.

Other manufacturers can buy the same barley and hops we use in Puritan.

But—we insure quality manufacture by the "CONTROLLED-TEMPERATURE PROCESS." The heat is watched during the malt making—not "just now and then" but every second—every minute—every hour of the twenty-four.

The uniformity of quality and results is one of Puritan's points of difference.

—Chances are you'll find a tenth more in the Puritan can than you've been getting.

—ask your dealer for Puritan. He has it.

Now the Borden Company is bringing it to your foodstore.

"Chateau"

The Aristocrat of All Cheese Foods

Also ... "Chateau" Pimento has this distinctive cream flavor ... plus the flavor of the finest pimentos.

DEMAND FOR STOCKS GROWS

Buying Interest Shifts to Railroads; Leaders Are Unchange on Exchange

NEW YORK, March 28—[illegible] and confident upward movements in the steel stocks, the motors, [illegible] and specialties in an active market today signalized the growing [illegible] demand for stocks and the [illegible] of the powerful [illegible] Though buying [illegible] shifted to the railroad stocks as the session advanced, there was [illegible] change in the leadership. United States Steel, General Electric, Vanadium, Du Pont and Standard Oil of New Jersey still basking in the speculative limelight.

A weakness in the mercantile stocks, the baking stocks and other specialties emphasized the fact that all sections of American industry are not enjoying the same measure of prosperity. Montgomery Ward tumbled off four points to the year's lowest price at 53. Sears Roebuck lost four points at 82. Continental Baking was also a weak spot.

Powerful concentration of buying [illegible] for General Motors forced [illegible] stock above 51 for the first time [illegible] seven points from the low [illegible] week. Chrysler sold at 40 up one [illegible]. Studebaker was under pressure and sold at the year's low figure at 40 1-2. General Electric was also on its best behavior, pushing ahead to above 83. American Tel. & Tel. rose four points to 254 1-2 and United States Steel was active near the peak price of 1[illegible] 1-4.

Curb Works Higher in Moderate Trading

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 28—The curb market worked moderately higher in quiet trading today. Considerable week-end profit taking appeared in a few of the favorites of earlier in the week, but the market on the whole showed a firmer tone, after the violent backing and filling yesterday. The unexpected reduction in brokers loans was interpreted as indicating that investment trusts and other institutions had been withdrawing funds from the call loan market and buying stocks outright.

United Light & Power "A" was a strong spot in the generally steady to firm utility group, rising a few points into new 1930 high ground. Electric Bond & Share and American Super power rallied moderately.

In the industrials operations for the rise were resumed in some of the aviation issues. Aviation Corp. of the Americas and Fokker both reached new high ground with moderate gains.

Bonds Move in Narrow Range

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 28—Firmness of money rates with the approach of the month-end kept bond trading in narrow range today. Some improvement appeared during the earlier dealings in bonds which had been easing while the over-extended softness in money was being corrected. With few exceptions, however, gains held to less than half a point.

Call funds renewed at four per cent. Time loans were unchanged in a dull market.

Obligations of the United States which declined sharply on Thursday were irregularly above yesterday's closing levels. The treasury 3⅛s rose a quarter point.

Investment rails made small fluctuations but an upward trend devel[illegible] in numerous prominent issues. Santa Fe General 4s, Northern Pacific 4s, Canadian Pacific debenture 4s, Union Pacific 4⅜s and Wabash first 5s were outstanding firm spots.

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Oranges hit the price ceiling today when both wholesale and retail quotations hit new high levels. With oranges which formerly sold around $4.50 and $5 a crate now selling at $10 and $11, grocers today hoisted the retail prices to a price range of 60 to 90 cents a dozen.

Possibility that these prices may prevail until late spring when a new crop is expected was expressed by grocers today.
